

Asha's Adventures

I've been flat out this week. Literally. Flat out in my bed! See what I did there?! I've snored my way through planning meetings, School Council and report signing. When I haven't been resting my eyes, I've spent time in the yard, visited Friendship Stop, played with my tennis ball, supawvised learning and of course, looked for food. I spotted a pawticularly delicious looking apple. But, the food police found it first. Food Police 1. Asha 0. I also went along to Miss Boyack's special morning tea. When we come back to school in Term 3, Miss Boyack will be Mrs Magdato because she's getting married in the school holidays. How exciting! We wish Miss Boyack and Jay a lifetime of happiness...and as many apples as they can eat.

Mr Thompson has been telling me all about the Soccer World Cup. He even invited me to be Assistant Coach for the staff and student soccer match at lunchtime on Tuesday. I saw the KPS film crew at the game so I think it will be on the next episode of KPS News. Can't wait to relive every moment!

In other news, I became a big brother last week! I have four new little sisters and one brother. They're hanging out at Seeing Eye Dogs Australia until they are old enough to leave our mum and live with puppy carers. When they get a lot bigger, they will start learning how to be guide dogs. Or pawhaps they'll go to school like me...

Overheard this week on my pawtrolls in the yard...
"Asha, you're like a giant cushion! A giant yellow cushion with legs!"
