

Asha's Adventures

Well, that was a quick week! I hope everyone enjoyed the looooong weekend. My teacher friends were busy writing reports on Monday. I don't write reports, so I kept myself busy with a walk, a nap and a snack.

Last week I started learning how to collect the newspaper from the front gate and deliver it to the office. I'm proud to announce that no newspapers have been harmed in my training. Unfortunately, I can't say the same about the eraser I found.

Right: I had a special delivery last week. My very own invitation to the Grade 6 graduation was hand delivered. Better check my suit still fits and find my bow tie!

Left: I spent some time 'helping' complete a puzzle. There were 400 pieces when I arrived. When I left, there were still 400 pieces - bet you thought I was going to say I ate one. But, I didn't! I just sat down quietly and supawvised the puzzle making process.

Right: My regular readers will know that every class spends an hour in the library each week. Some of my Grade 1 friends showed me a book they read in their library session. I'm always ready to listen to a story.

Speaking of books, have you visited our KPS Book Swap? It's in the hallway near the office. You can swap a book you've read many times and no longer want to keep for a book you haven't read yet. There are loads of books to choose from.

PS: I just realised if you spell 'swap' backwards, it spells paws! How pawsome! 😊

Left: For the fourth year in a row, we're helping brighten people's Christmases by teaming up with The Salvation Army. Last year we collected enough goodies to fill two big cars. I remember that I couldn't help deliver the presents to Broadford's Salvation Army shop because the cars were too full. You can put your donations in the boxes near the Christmas tree at the office. Don't worry, we're not donating the kids.

Comments and questions that have put a smile on my dial this week...

"Asha, you just get cuter and cuter....and hungrier and hungrier!"
"You're very good at walking up stairs."

"Asha, you feel like warm snow."
"You're so fluffy and warm, Asha!"
